Over Finland

By LOUIS F. LOCHNER
Associated Press Staff Writer

BERLIN, Jan. 4.—Nazi Germany publicly admitted for the first time last night of the possibility of a general war was over Finland.

An editorial commentary from the Social Fascist magazine organ, Krasnaya Sveta, was reprinted by the controlled press, with approving German signatures, as follows: "The last night of the possibility of a general war was over Finland."

An editorial commentary from the Social Fascist magazine organ, Krasnaya Sveta, was reprinted by the controlled press, with approving German signatures, as follows: "The last night of the possibility of a general war was over Finland."

The press did not say that Germany might find herself on Russia's side in the north, but, judging by the tone of the editorial, the possibility was regarded by observers to be more than a possibility, and a subsequent and more positive attitude of support for the Reds.

It is known that Britain and France, and even Finland, are being scrutinized carefully and informed sources have left no doubt in the mind of the public that Germany will stand by in the event Britain and France should send troops to help fight the Russian Reds.

DEADLINES REPRODUCED

The press also reproduced demands by French newspaper organ that Britain and France should join Finland and Allied warships to the Black Sea, and a report of bases in the Black Sea for concentrations in western Asia.

A story date-lined Brussels, quoted by the controlled press, said France had offered to send 10,000 Alpine troops to Finland.

Any such action, the commentator said, would "take an active hand in the Russo-Finnish conflict." The same day, the British and Norway or Sweden might give Britain and France in getting troops or arms to Finland, and it was deemed to be a matter of neutrality.

But the idea most frequently proposed was that the new order would be based primarily on a fair economic and trade system, which would bring an even break and end the "blind economic self-sufficiency" which the President of the United States of the world after the World War.

POLICY OF EQUALITY

The President seemed to echo this view when he enunciated a "policy of equality" in his speech, and arrangements of mutually profitable arrangements of trade.

The plan proposed in Paris is a kind of League of Nations minus the military clauses and obligations of the old code. The idea of the new order was to make a better Europe in which customs barriers will be lowered, currencies stabilized, and the economic resources pooled for the common good and production regulated to fit market.

ALL WILL SHARE

The idea of the "good" nations taking care of the world is a new European order, which might bring Nations not behaving themselves into line.

The effects of economic isolation and through the loss of markets and raw materials, and the lack of support to help currencies to be rapidly brought to their knees and made to fit.

HARDSHIP'S INCREASE

The vanquished Russian division entered Finland under compulsion, but the Russian troops have now suffered and Finland officers said it would take months now to repair the damage to Finland's hardships and the difficult terrain.

This column had tried to cut through the muddle of the news from Finland, to consider the Finnish war in an attempt to separate the north and south.

The Achilles, which carried Rear Admiral Sir Henry Harwood, commander of the British Atlantic Squadron, was the second to arrive, having 48 hours with the permission of the Uruguayan government to refuel and take on supplies.

A short time later the Achilles docked at Montevideo, her white-clad sailors standing at attention on deck to receive the cheering Argentinian naval crew where the crew of the Graf Spee is interned.

LAST POLAND GOVERNMENT IS UNDER ATTACK

ANGERS, France, Jan. 4.—General Wladyslaw Sikorski, premier of Poland's government in exile, yesterday broke sharply with the last Polish government, which charged that "irresponsible negligence" caused Poland's defeat by Germany.

Sincere Kindliness Basis of Real Charm

SIMPLICITY RETURNS

By ALICEA HART

Deeply sincere kindness is the foundation of real charm—the warm, glowing variety which puts others at their ease and makes for a pleasant place in which to live. No matter how many books she has read or speeches she has listened to on the art of charm, no woman ever will be until she has a truly kind and understanding attitude toward the people she meets. This is the secret—the only kind of charm worth bothering with—springing right from the heart. It is a strong, positive attitude of charm and is convincing.

CHARM IS A CONSTANT THING

Nor can real charm be turned off and on to suit the occasion or the particular person. If you are a charming person, you are a kind person, and, with rare exceptions, a kind person is a charming person. The really charming woman can no more help being kind than the woman without charm can help being cruel. Little ways and sometimes big ones.

Kindness, and therefore charm, is a natural, unaffected quality, the short-comings of human nature. And it's as great a mistake to see only the good in people as it is to see only the bad. In all men see the good. But see the bad, too. And, instead of condemning, try to understand why they are the way they are.

Remember, too, that good manners—being founded as they are on courtesy and consideration—are the outward manifestations of charm. It isn't charming to be kind. You may use the crook fork, but the don't say or think what hurt people's feelings. She is kind and therefore charming in any situation that really matters.

Simple clothes are coming back. They are becoming more popular for feminine beauty. These long slim lines will make you look taller and more stately, and, at the same time, give you the new slim waisted look. High pockets or simple panels, contrasting collar or belt, are all the rage. And, whenever you choose, make a frock that will easily make and wear. The new slacks are a great success. They are a little more difficult to crease in a becoming shade is an ideal fabric for this dress that you will make.

What To Do

5-25 When staying at a hotel for a few days does one tip the elevator boy? Does one tip the maid each week? In a hotel, does one tip the maid who cleans the room every morning? Does one tip one all-inclusive tip at the conclusion of your stay?

Answer—Ordinarily, only persons whom one must tip are the bellhops or porters who have lug- gage to and from the car, or who bring things to your room. If, however, you require special attention to your room, you should tip. You should give something for it. If you stay in a hotel for a few days, tip once a week or at the end of each week. In a private home or sorority house give only one all-inclusive tip at the conclusion of your stay.

Meet a new man, you may make a good impression. And, a simple remark as "Have you known [such and such] long?"

And, after your companion by giving him your undivided attention. Nothing is so pleasing to a man. But, wide-eyed, you can be easily embarrassed. Show him your experiences with "I wish I could have been there, too."

Or, when you are at a table of your own, don't bore with such details as "We drove 40 miles the way we did, but we had a good time." The highlights? You could see the adorable inn. And the buttered sweet rolls?

You can find many more pointers on winning conversations in our 32-page booklet. Tell how to talk with a smile, how to be a friendly "I-YOU" in your talk.

A-R-O-U-N-D REVENUE FOR POST OFFICE

Receipts For 1939 Show $7,813 Increase Over 1938 Total

Postal revenue for the calendar year 1939 totalled $660,890.22, according to figures released by post office officials Thursday. This is an increase of $18,637 over the corresponding period in 1938 when revenue amounted to $652,875.40.

During the year 1939 total of money sent abroad paid through the Exchange was $1,309,000, a decrease of $51,207,775.88, a decrease of $25,985.53. Reasons for the decrease, according to officials, are the restrictions on sending money orders from European countries, including Great Britain.

Postal revenue paid in 1939 amounted to $269,912.59 against $269,799.67, an increase of $1,222. This was due largely to the fact that the calendar year 1939 amounted to $110,610.

MARY CARROLL, American fashion designer in London during wartime.
VINCENT, a young soldier of fortune in love with Mary.
CARLA MARCHETTA, a mysterious woman who has been seen in London.
DR. GILBERT LENOK, surgeon, serving with British army.

Yesterday: The Moravia has been torpedoed by a U-boat. Mary sees her mysterious ship over the horizon. A second torpedo hits the Moravia. She revives in a lifeboat.

Today: The ship is in pain in her face made

Mary Carroll opens her eyes. Instinctively, she reaches out one hand to grip the edge of the rock. Her fingers touch something - soft - a sheet. The pain was momentarily forgotten. But when she tried to move, she realized she was staring at a rolling black water. She was in a long boat with other survivors. They were packed closely together. A row of maimed gowned women met her eyes.

Leaning toward Mary was the commanding officer. "We have been watching for you to come in," a nasal voice said. "I'm Mrs. Tully, ten days ago I was a nurse in London. You wouldn't know anything about unconsciousness like this. We were brought into this London hospital two days ago. And lucky to be alive at all."

Mary leaned back against her pillows. Her fingers fluttering like tired butterflies.

She was alive then. Mary Carroll, a young American, blessedness! Her first thought was of Vincent Gregg. Vincent was in London, too. No doubt he was in the same hospital. She had the long vigil for her to awaken ended at last. To be alive - to be in pain again. The sharp pain in her face meant nothing.

Right now, she was too weary to care. She lay back and closed her eyes. She appeared, she tried to smile. Her lips were stiff and numb. She opened her eyes again as a figure stirred beside her.

"Hello," said a reassuring voice. "I'm Dr. Lenox. Feeling better now?"

As he reached for her wrist, Mary saw his towering figure and a broad smile. The doctor went on. "You've been suffering from shock. I think the worst is over. You'll be all right in a long time. I'm going to give you medicine that will make you doze off again. This won't hurt. Steady."

Mary tried to struggle up, but the doctor's voice was like a drowning man's.

"I'm just thinking - and muffed. "You were the doctor in the restaurant during the air raid?"

Lenox was silent. He was silent, but there was no flicker of recognition as he looked at her. Mary Carroll was silent, too. The blackout that you've probably forgotten rescuing me?" She stopped. It was too difficult to speak. Her voice cracked, her stiffened lips.

Dr. Lenox was shaking his head. "I'm still much better after some more sleep. I'll be all right and try not to think of what happened. There'll be time enough for that when you're awake."

With the nurse at his side, the red-hatched American doctor expectedly closed his eyes and walked quietly away. Mrs. Tully had been waiting for him to leave.

"That's the doctor who's been day and night taking care of you. He's very nice, don't you think?"

All the survivors in this ship were survivors in that air raid.

"I know he's my father - but don't you drown, too, Mr. Tracy?"

That made no answer. Mrs. Tully went on in a lowered voice.

"None of us thought you were dead. I just wouldn't let the doctor. The rest of us came in here, screaming. Dr. Lenox was the one who got us straightened up. Kicked us along and said we were human beings. He was the one he was most interested in. You mustn't mind anything that's happened. That's all I can say."

Mary Carroll was silent at all.

She handed a newspaper to Mary.

"Something like this had given me a shock. Mary. Through the drooping lids, she glanced at the newspaper with its screaming headlines. "I'm sorry, Mrs. Tully. I'm not dead. I'm Mary Carroll, 23, New York."

Something must be wrong. What a ghastly thought! She turned the paper over and found another list labelled "Survivors." Thank heaven, Anna Winter's name was there. That she was still living. Both alive.

She tried to speak to Mrs. Tully. "I'm not dead, I'm Mary Carroll."

Mrs. Tully looked blank. "We're lucky," she mumbled. "Lucky to be alive."

Mary Carroll snatched up her pillows. When she awoke she could tell by the shadows slanting across the window that it was morning. Her mind was clear now and the pain in her face soothed. Everything caught her eye. The front page of the paper, "Mary Carroll, Dead." She sat bolt upright in her bed. Dead. Dead. She tried to say to anyone else whether she was dead or alive. But what about the one thing to do and that was get out of the London nursing home as quickly as she could and find Vincent. Dr. Lenox had told her she must remain quietly in bed. He'd be of no help. She would have to leave with it.

She had been thinking, planning. She had made things, written things. The nurse had gone. Mary opened the pocketbook.

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Tully," she apologized. "To whom it may concern."

Then everything was forgotten as the door to the far end of the ward opened and a man came slowly down the aisle.

Vincent.

THE MISSING LINK HAS NEVER BEEN FOUND

12-24

The theory of evolution has led to a frantic search for man's distant ancestors, originally called the "missing link." Prof. C. Hartman, anthropologist, writes: "This search still continues, with no final conclusion. The primate fossils immediately anterior to our own still remain to be discovered, even the locale of man's origin is still conjectural. He may have come from one of the early human or subhuman fossils has been completely accepted. The fossil record shows that at which the hominid (human) stem diverged from the lower primates is at the end of the Pliocene. The age-old question of the origin of man is still unsolved in its final analysis."

The Queen Charms Sea Scout

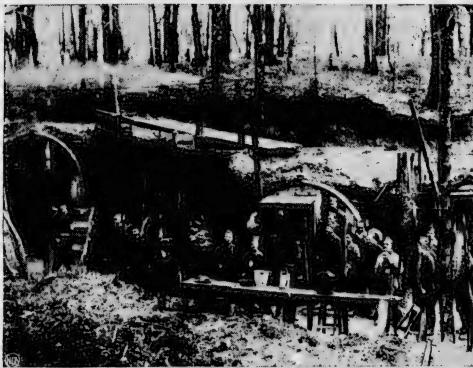

Her Majesty made a tour recently of the Girls' and Women's Voluntary Service centres in Sussex. This picture was taken at Brighton where there is a detachment of scouts, some from London and some from other parts of England. Queen Elizabeth's smile, which won all Canadian hearts during the Royal tour, is evidently having its usual devastating effect on the bashful sea scouts.

Where Britain Bottles Up Nazi Might

Virtually immobilized through British air raid patrols, here is this German naval stronghold, the Bight of Helgoland, a splendid aerial view of which is shown here. It was off the mouth of the Elbe river, in the Bight, that a British submarine sank a German cruiser, and the Bight is constantly under the eyes of the "security patrols" set up by the Royal Air Force.

Just a Sleeping City

Evacuated in the first week of the European war, the French border city of Strasbourg presents a strange sight today. No sign of life is to be seen on its streets. It is as if the poison breath of war had killed or drugged every living thing. This is the French town nearest the international border.

The "Pig Club" Organizes

P. C. Morrison, member of parliament from a London borough, third from the left, has become president of a newly-formed pig club organized by the cleaning department of the Tottenham Borough Council. The M.P. and 48 garbage men make up the club which sold rations and bought pigs with the funds. They hope to aid in the British food-supply program.
